

Angie Taylor

Angie is a lifelong learner and has a passion for serving as a training and development professional. She has spent the past four years at the University of Nebraska Foundation, where she serves as Technical Trainer to support the organization's mission to help the university change lives and save lives. Angie's primary responsibilities include delivering technical training, supportive content and eLearning solutions. In addition to IRL and Zoom virtual sessions, she uses Vyond video, and Articulate Rise and Storyline.

She manages all aspects of user training for the advancement system (Blackbaud CRM) and related training over events management, prospect management and the Donor Engagement Process (Plus Delta™). She provides training and supports the CRM's funds management portal, used by university partners to access funds and thank donors for their gifts. Angie also trains new hires on expense reimbursement software; serves as a trainer and SME for the organization's CMS (LifeRay, soon transitioning to WordPress); and uses eLearning solutions to satisfy HIPAA compliance requirements for hundreds of users annually.

Angie holds a Bachelor of Arts in Art History and Criticism from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln with emphases in Classics and English. She is a newer member of ATD, joining in January 2019. Angie is very excited and humbled to work alongside extraordinarily talented and passionate individuals to benefit our personal growth, workplaces and communities.
